

SKI CANADA SPRING 2008 ARTICLE ON KOOTENAY SKI TOWNS.

The following was copied from the Spring edition of Ski Canada about Rossland:

THE BUZZ: Eventually someone was going to survey Red's expansive terrain and the aesthetic town at it's foot and say, "Hey, there's some money to be made here." Locals are watching with trepidation as the mountain becomes the personal business experiment of San Diego entrepreneur Howard Katkov. So far real estate seems to be coming long before lift upgrades. That means Red and Granite are still in the dark ages when it comes to on-hill infrastructure – a happy state-of-affairs for riders with duct tape holding their ski pants together, but disconcerting for high-speed city types who have ridden only bubble lifts and gondolas.
